The naked truth about male nudity

On a recent trip to New Orleans, my partner and I visited a resort called The Country Club on a recommendation from a friend.

The place is fantastic. It has free WiFi, a nice restaurant and a refreshing pool. Oh, and did I mention it's clothing-optional?

The club is open to everyone: men, women, straight, gay, old and young (but not too young). The idea of hanging out—and “hanging out”—at the pool in the hot sun with like-minded strangers appealed to us in a naturalistic sort of way. Plus, we were on vacation in the Big Easy, so anything goes, right?

Within 30 seconds of arriving at the resort, I had stripped down, applied sunscreen to my delicates and lain out on a chaise for all the other patrons and the Google spy satellites to see. Then I noticed something: I was one of the few gay guys to doff his duds. In fact, the majority of the people who opted for no clothing were the straight women and the old guys who spent the past 50 years gorging on beignets and jambalaya—neither of whom interested me.

Despite my concern that my crawdads would get burnt in the hot N'awlins sun, it ended up being a really nice, relaxing and freeing afternoon at the pool. There is something about dropping your inhibitions with your trousers that makes everyone equal.

I spent a while chatting with a very nice—and very naked—straight guy who goes to The Country Club with his girlfriend. He told me, “It's actually more awkward to be clothed here. That causes people to stare.”

Fast-forward to last Friday, when I had that very experience in Chicago.

When Brad and I returned to winter 3.0 back here in Antarctica, I was lamenting the fact that nothing remotely close to the NOLA resort exists here. But then I heard about an all-male nudist group that hosts monthly gatherings for men under 40(ish) at a private residence. We decided to keep our naked weekend events running and even roped a friend into attending the group's April cocktail party with us.

The moment we walked in, all eyes were on us because we had clothes on and no one else did. It actually made me feel more vulnerable than if I were wearing nothing. That was quickly rectified. (What can I say? I'm an exhibitionist.) The party was in a nice condo with plenty of drinks and a nice spread, although I am not sure if the hosts chose cocktail weenies and sweet-and-sour meatballs as a double entendre.

The main thing I noticed that evening was that being naked at a party forces you to look people in the eye and have actual conversations. Sure, there is the initial glance down to compare-and-contrast, but then you actually get to know people.

I never once was distracted with the thought, “I wonder what he looks like naked?” I already knew.

Who needs evolution? Devotees of the Paleolithic diet say they feel better eating like hunter-gatherers

By Katie Donbavand

FOR REDEYE

Collin Korab gets teased a lot by his co-workers. They don't understand why he has chicken carcasses on his desk after lunch. They don't get why his friends run barefoot and toss around 20-pound medicine balls.

No wonder his colleagues call him Cave-man Boy.

Though Korab doesn't carry a club or live in a cave (he lives in Wrigleyville), there is some truth to the nickname. He's a follower of the Paleolithic—or caveman—diet, which means he eats only what he could hunt or gather.

"People often don't understand why I do it," said Korab, 26. "They try to poke holes in the theory, which doesn't really bother me."

The basic idea behind the paleo diet is that food production has evolved much faster than our bodies have. Therefore, paleo people say, we should try to mimic the eating habits of our ancient ancestors, sticking to lean meats and vegetables and skipping bread, artificial sweeteners and alcohol. Devotees say they lose weight and feel great.

"It works for many people, particularly if you hold on to a lot of belly fat," said Chicago nutrition consultant Sherry Belcher.

She says the diet also can help lower cholesterol and blood pressure, as well as offer other health benefits.

"Removing any and all of these [nonpaleo] foods will have nothing but a positive effect on the body," said Sheena Lawrick, a former Olympian and coach at Windy City CrossFit in Lakeview, where members are encouraged to combine a paleo diet with their workouts. Lawrick also notes that paleo isn't so much about counting calories—it's about feeding your body good food.

"A well-respected nutrition expert once told me, 'Food is fuel, food is not reward.' That stuck with me," said Jon Callahan, 39, of Andersonville, whose whole family—including his wife and three children, ages 3, 5 and 8—eats paleo. Callahan says he is sharper and has more energy since shifting to a paleo diet two years ago.

For some, paleo is more than food. It's a lifestyle that has them bragging about way-old-school gym routines in which they scurry through the underbrush on all fours and stocking their refrigerators with liver and other organ meats. Some go even more hardcore, eating raw meat and giving blood to replicate their ancestors' scuffles in prehistoric battles. That seems a bit extreme to Lakeview caveman Jon Dolias: "Nutrition is one thing; draining yourself of blood? I'll skip that."

Dolias, 26, has been following the paleo diet for more than a year but admits his resolve is often tested. "I'm a sugar addict, so giving that

PREHISTORIC CUISINE

Paleo peeps share their tips for navigating menus when dining out and give us some favorite caveman-friendly Chicago restaurants. K.D.

Bandera

535 N. Michigan Ave. 312-644-3524

"Going out to lunch or dinner has become a bit tricky," paleo devotee Korab said. But he swears the seared sashimi tuna salad with mixed greens, avocado and mango at Bandera never lets him down.

Ranalli's

1512 W. Berwyn Ave. 773-334-1300

Dave Kelley, of Andersonville, admits that, "thin crust pizza is [my downfall]." When he ventures to Ranalli's, he fights off the temptation with a dozen grilled chicken wings and a spinach or chopped salad.

The Florentine

151 W. Adams St. 312-660-8200

Brunch at the Florentine, in the JW Marriott, is a favorite of Callahan, who says he's "extremely devoted to following a Paleo-style program." The Andersonville resident recommends the bacon, mushroom and tomato omelet with sauteed vegetables and sausage.

up was a huge challenge," he said. Traveling also tempts him. "Louisiana tests me every time!" Dolias said. "Sure, I could have grilled Gulf fish, but I could also chow down on etouffee, and how often do I get to have that?"

Even so, he says the sacrifices are worth it. "I have more energy, I feel better, I look in the mirror and I'm happy with what I see."

Belcher warns that paleo is not for everyone. "People who take a lot of medications or have a complicated health history many times need a little bit more of a special diet," she said.

But for those interested in learning more, devotees suggest starting with paleo godfather Loren Cordain's website, thepaleodiet.com, and books, including "The Paleo Diet Book." Also: Robb Wolf's robbwolf.com and "The Paleo Solution."

Then prepare for lots of questions from friends, family and co-workers.

Korab cheerfully withstands the taunting and sticks with his caveman philosophy, in part because he's dropped about 20 pounds since going paleo a year and a half ago. More and more, he says, he's been watching disbelievers join his tribe.

"My roommate, who was a big critic of the paleo, recently started [the diet] and has lost 23 pounds in five weeks," he said, smiling widely. "So the proof is in the paleo pudding."

British invasion

"Doctor Who" head writer and executive producer Stephen Moffat doesn't lose one ounce of the Who-ness of his show by filming, for the first time in the show's 48-year history, in the U.S.

Used wisely and not too much in the two-part season premiere, the Utah desert looks magnificent in Saturday's "The Impossible Astronaut," and even better in next week's "Day of the Moon."

Moffat also has outdone himself with another insanely intricate story and his sinister new baddies, The Silence. This two-parter is jaw-droppingly good, but I fear I shouldn't go on about plot. As the mysterious River Song would say: Spoilers!

Instead let's concentrate on how wonderfully well Matt Smith, Karen Gillan and Arthur Darvill have grown into their roles as the time-traveling Doctor and his companions, Amy Pond and her Mister, Rory Williams.

Just one year after debuting as the Eleventh Doctor, Smith is disarmingly charming as the free-wheeling Time Lord, injecting The Doctor with a youthful zeal that's as wild as his marvelously unruly hair. Smith always has delivered Moffat's zingers with gusto, but he also gives him newfound gravity.

More than any time last year, this Doctor feels like an old soul bottled up in a rubbery young man's body, with the solemnity of a man who has been there, done that for 900-odd years (depending, of course, on when you meet him).

Smith's physicality, however, might be the most remarkable—and enjoyable—part of his performance. He can rouse laughter with a simple sweep of his hand at President Nixon just as effortlessly as he can conjure your concern by dejectedly cradling his head in that same hand.

Smith has settled into a rocking groove with his co-stars as well. Unlike at times last season, Gillan's Amy doesn't get lost behind the flashier Doctor or his, well, whatever she is to him, River Song (Alex Kingston, cheeky as ever).

Darvill, however, is the revelation, making Rory the heart of the TARDIS time machine. Jealous, proud, self-confident or crushed—but almost always confused—Rory has become my favorite character thanks to Darvill's quiet performance.

DVD

The King's Speech

Available now

Director Tom Hopper's Oscar-winning film uses one man's physical limitations as the core for this moving story of courage and friendship. Colin Firth turns in a standout performance that conveys how the mantle of royalty is both a curse and blessing. Geoffrey Rush finds the right balance between respect for the crown and concern for the man wearing it. This is not a movie simply about a king making a speech. It's a complex emotional journey that will inspire and entertain. RICK BENTLEY, THE FRESNO BEE

TV

Cinema Verite

8 p.m. Saturday, HBO

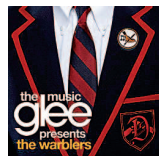

This dishy docudrama about the making of 1973's "An American Family" captures what some consider reality TV's big-bang moment, when producer Craig Gilbert (James Gandolfini) and PBS put the Loud family of Santa Barbara, Calif., on TV and exposed their every secret—gay son, philandering husband, unhappy wife. Four decades later, that groundbreaking series still merits attention, even as has-been celebrities and recovering addicts compete for the reality spotlight. "Cinema Verite" smartly conveys the lure of fame and its unpredictable ramifications. GREG EVANS, BLOOMBERG NEWS

Glee: The Music Presents The Warblers

The Glee Cast

Dalton Academy's Warblers never fail to entertain on "Glee." Lead Warbler Blaine Anderson (Darren Criss) fills the tracks with an upbeat warmth that often surpasses the originals (Katy Perry's "Teenage Dream"), especially when aided by clever a cappella arrangements where the group sings everything from swirling synths to jangling guitars. It's no surprise this collection of their songs is so good it would succeed even without the show. GLENN GAMBOA, NEWSDAY

VIDEO GAMES

Mass Effect 2: Arrival

For XB360, SP3, PC

The last piece of downloadable content for "Mass Effect 2" shows just how close the life-extinguishing Reapers are to gaining the galaxy. Sent on a mission to rescue a captured agent with information about a Reaper artifact, Commander Shepard spends most of this mission fighting solo, and it can be tricky to take on heavily armed foes without the backup a "Mass Effect" player is accustomed to having. "Arrival" adds a couple of hours of good action to the base game. JUSTIN HOEGER, THE SACRAMENTO BEE

Somewhere

Available now

Stephen Dorff plays an action-film movie star bored with his life of sex, drugs and fame. The only escape is through his daughter, Cleo (Elle Fanning), who lives in the real world of video games, skating lessons and camp stays. Dorff and Fanning have an unforced chemistry, partly because director Sofia Coppola allowed them to improvise many scenes. They're so good together, it almost saves the movie. Almost. Coppola's spartan approach to the movie creates vast wastelands empty of emotion. RICK BENTLEY, THE FRESNO BEE

Make a statement

Designer Coco Chanel urged women to remove one piece of jewelry before they left the house in order to be accessorized properly. It's safe to assume that with necklaces as fabulous as the ones shown here, she would have changed that advice. Slip one on—the bigger the better—and prepare to wow those around you. # OK, we'll Bite

By Sara White

I swore I was so done with brunch at Bite. Empty tables everywhere, but you want me to wait outside till the rest of my party shows up? I'm out. But after the Ukrainian Village cafe shut down in January for a serious revamp, I mustered all my objectivity and went back ... and then went back for more.

What it isn't: A diner. It was reported that Bite, which has the same owner as Longman & Eagle, would return as a classic American or Southern diner. It's got a six-seat counter and a bacon-eggs-and-toast plate ($9), but it's otherwise L&E Light.

What it is: Cuter than a diner, cuter than the old Bite. Ashy wooden tables, dark brown banquettes and perfect powder blue chairs.

I can't stop thinking about ... the mash-brown, a deep-fried round of mashed russet and red potatoes and scallions ($3). It's kind of genius. Also: the breakfast poutine ($10). It's fries, cheese curds, pickled jalapenos and Fresno chilies covered in smoked bacon gravy and topped with two poached eggs. A friend ordered every time we went.

Meh: The tofu scramble of the day ($9) needs a little something-something in the way of seasoning. (A version with haricots verts, crimini mushrooms and piquillo peppers was the best among those I tried.) Tofu served on toast is tricky—it's crumbly and cumbersome, whether you pick it up or knife-and-fork it. But it does come with that mashbrown.

Sweet stuff: The banana-pecan challah French toast ($8) with sea salt whipped cream was dry and barely drizzled with syrup. On another visit, a French toast special with strawberries and banana was right-on: not too thick or dry.

Breakfast poutine
BARRY BRECHSEIN
FOR METROMIX

Buzz factor: The sweet servers kept the Dark Matter coffee coming. (PS: It's roasted a few blocks away.)

What's for lunch? Go back for the burger ($9, put an egg on it for an extra $1) and the fried chicken leg sandwich ($11).

Wait time: It's a tight squeeze, so be prepared to wait outside. Or show up after noon and grab a drink in the adjacent Empty Bottle. (Bite is BYOB.)

Bottom line: Bite has long been a hipster hangout, and so far that hasn't changed. But its stylish dining room and foodie menu are sure to attract the over-30 crowd that doesn't make it to the Empty Bottle much anymore.

Greatest

Advertising, in case you haven't noticed, is everywhere. That includes an ever-increasing product placement in the entertainment industry, a trend that inspired

The buzz: "Super Size Me" director Spurlock sometimes gets so wrapped up in his pursuit of gleeful entertainment that he loses track of his point.

(See his wildly ill-conceived 2008 doc "Where in the World is Osama Bin Laden?") He's usually very good on-screen company, however, meaning our guide's a pleasure regardless of what's on his tour.

The verdict: Spurlock's handling a lot of issues here, and he's not the best juggler. How and when did advertising become so invasive, and does the public even notice/care at this point? How does product placement truly affect the financing of a movie? What is the impact of all this marketing, and does the concept of "selling out" even matter now (dude, how can you not mention the Black Eyed Peas here)? The punchline of "Greatest

SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

Movie" is about the disintegrating line between entertainment and commerce; Spurlock's achievement is that even as he recognizes the absurdity behind his plugging of Pom Wonderful Pomegranate juice and Ban deodorant, some viewers will still go out and buy them.

Did you know? Big Boi of Outkast recalls his group passing on selling a song to a "Got Milk?" campaign because Andre 3000 doesn't drink milk. So glad a group (who I like very much, for the record) with a song called "We Luv Deez Hoez" clings tightly to its principles. MATT PAIS IS REDEYE'S MOVIE CRITIC.

JUAN URIBE

THEN: An average hitter at best, Uribe did play stellar defense throughout 2005. He also assisted on the final out during the Sox's championship run that season.

SINCE: He's added a World Series ring to his collection, playing in 148 games for the champion San Francisco Giants in 2010. Uribe then parlayed that into a three-year, $21 million contract with the Dodgers. Not bad for a .255 career hitter.

JON GARLAND

THEN: He turned in the best of his eight years with the White Sox in 2005 (18-10, 3.50 ERA, 115 K's), when a dominant rotation carried the team to a World Series victory.

SINCE: Garland has made at least 32 starts every season since the Sox traded him to the L.A. Angels in 2007; he signed with the Dodgers after the 2010 season. The Sox could use a guy like him if Jake Peavy can't shake off his injuries.

ESCAPE TO L.A.

4 former Chicago ballplayers are searching for a Hollywood ending

By Chris Sosa REDEYE

There's something familiar about these Los Angeles Dodgers, who are facing the Cubs in Chicago this weekend. In case you can't put your finger on it, RedEye is here to help: The Dodgers' roster features four former Chicago players who made headlines—good and not-so-good—while they were in town. Here's how their careers have played out.

CHSOSA@TRIBUNE.COM | @SAYITISSOSA

TED LILLY

THEN: He put together three solid seasons with the Cubs and was working on a fourth before they traded him in 2010. But Lilly might be most famous in Chicago for slamming his glove down during a rough postseason start against Arizona in 2007.

SINCE: Lilly is not off to a great start in 2011, but he's healthy, which is more than quite a few Cubs starting pitchers can say right now.

AARON MILES

THEN: He started his career as a Sox infield prospect before being traded for Uribe. Miles then signed a two-year, $4.9 million deal with the Cubs before the 2009 season, but he played only 74 games before being dealt to Oakland.

SINCE: He's off to a rough start in L.A. and is making a little more than the league minimum. It's doubtful Chicago fans miss him all that much.

Watching the Bulls in the playoffs reminds me of ...

... the Indy .500.

... watching the Blackhawks in the playoffs last year, except trade hockey beards for basketball tattoos.

.. Luke Skywalker becoming a Jedi. Use the Force, Derrick!

... everything that is great and terrible about Chicago as a sports town. Put 'em away, it's just the Pacers!

... being at a restaurant. The Derrick Rose tastes delicious, but where IS that side of Carlos Boozer I ordered?

Enter a number between 1 and 9 in the empty squares. The clues are the numbers in the white circles that give the sum of the solution numbers: above the line are across clues; below the line are down clues. Thus, a clue of 3 will produce a solution of 2 and 1, and a 5 will produce 4 and 1, or 2 and 3, but, of course, which squares they go in will depend on the solution of a clue in the other direction. No digit can be repeated in a solution. Answer at redyechicago.com/puzzles. EDITED BY MICHAEL MEPHAM

SCRABBLE

Make a 2- to 7-letter word from the letters in each row. Add points of each word, using scoring directions at right. Finally, 7-letter words get a 50-point bonus. "Blanks" used as any letter have no point value. All the words are in the Official Scrabble Players Dictionary, 4th Edition. ## HOW ARE WILLS AND KATE PREPPING FOR THEIR BIG DAY? WE KNOW ... SORT OF

There's less than a week until Prince William and Kate Middleton stroll down the most-watched aisle in the world, and there's so much left to do! While the real royals bustle around taking care of last-minute business, RedEye cobbled together a (nearly) completely nonfiction version of what Britain's finest will be up to next week.

Kate

Monday:
Finding a replacement bridesmaid after embarrassing incident at bachelorette party. Just because my husband is going to be king doesn't mean my bestie can pop out of a limo topless.

Tuesday:
Checking in with the florist to make sure the roses are—NO! THOSE ARE NOT PROPER ENGLISH ROSES, YOU VILE COW! Phew, OK, crisis averted.

Wednesday:
Mani-pedis for everyone! Including the queen's corgis! That old bag's too crotchety to notice anyway, and I've got to have some kicks while I still can.

Thursday:
Staying at the Goring Hotel tonight—a touch creepy sounding, no? Makes me think of a horror picture. Fortunately there's a waterproof television in the loo ... break out the expensive bath salts!

Friday:
Wedding time! I'm so not looking forward to that horrid fruitcake Wills insisted on, but hopefully he'll like my cheeky underthings. Oh that Victoria and her secrets.

Wills

Monday:
Final fittings of royal wedding garb. Finally learn what a cravat is. Fortunately, being in the military means I get to carry a sword down the aisle. En garde, wife!

Tuesday:
Practice saying "I do" in order to find the most droll accent. I probably should do this out of earshot of Harry, though, because he's liable to call me a wanker and take me to the strip club.

Wednesday:
Whisked away by Harry once again. He's got the trashiest taste in chicks, but what am I going to do, say "no" to my only brother? I'm saving that for Kate—already talked her into letting me go ring-free, heh.

Thursday:
Wedding is tomorrow. Bugger. Must get lipstick stains off the bloody cravat. Good thing I'm hanging out with my father tonight—he's an expert in such matters. And scotch.

Friday:
What up, England! Get ready to put a crown on it! If that ruddy Harry says one thing about my hairline in his toast, it's off with his head! And no, Kate, I'm STILL not wearing a damned ring.

"I could easily not act again. It's not a problem."

—Mel Gibson (above) to deadline.com, in his first big interview since we heard him ranting on tape to his ex-girlfriend.

Jerry dumps The Hair

Jerry Seinfeld (above) reportedly backed out of an appearance for Donald Trump (below) after the businessman's recent controversial comments about President Obama. The Donald struck back with an insult-laden public letter taking shots at Seinfeld's show "The Marriage Ref."

Jeremy Renner, who starred in the Oscar-winning "The Hurt Locker," has been offered the lead role in "The Bourne Legacy," according to CNN. Reportedly, Renner won't play Jason Bourne (the part Matt Damon made famous), but another spy who went through the same program as Bourne did.

Don't think pink

Nicki Minaj wants to put out a fragrance this year, but don't expect anything sweet from the "Pink Friday" singer/hip-hop Barbie. "I want to smell like a sexy and confident woman, not like candy," Minaj told allure.com. She also said she wasn't sure how many wigs she owns. "A hundred? Right before I walk out the door, I grab one." Celebs—they're just like us.

'The Office' is hiring

And Jim Carrey is filling out an application. Carrey will guest star in the May 19 season finale as someone who interviews for Michael Scott's job, according to ew.com. Even though it looks like Will Ferrell has taken over as Deangelo Vickers, others vying for the job include Ricky Gervais, Will Arnett, James Spader, Ray Romano and Catherine Tate.

Now do a little spin

Johnny Weir's Little Black Dress collection will make its sparkly debut April 30 at the Ice Dreams skating show in Bensenville, Women's Wear Daily reported. The collection, which will be available on edressme.com, features tulle, feathers and sequins, according to WWD. But will it have jazz hands?
